

Journal hosting service at Lund University Library

/MG 2013-05-07

Lund University Library will offer the following service as a journal host. The service will consist of technical support and software maintenance, with no additional publishing support services.

Lund University Library will be responsible for:

- Keeping the software up and running
- Upgrading software
- Running a back-up system
- Staff support and help desk on how to use OJS

All copyright-related issues are solely the responsibility of the journal.

The software used will be Open Journal Systems (<http://pkp.sfu.ca/?q=ojs>). The software will be run as-is and Lund University Library will not do any local technical development of OJS. Lund University Library will not create customized user interfaces beyond the possibilities offered in the default user interface.

Journals that have an organizational connection to Lund University (e.g. editors are affiliated to Lund University) may use this service free of charge. If the journal in the future should have editors who are not affiliated to Lund University, the terms in this agreement shall still apply.

Changes to the terms of this service made by Lund University Library should be announced at least 6 months in advance. In case of termination of the service Lund University Library will run the service until the hosted journals have found other solutions up to 12 months after announcing the termination of the service.